The New York markets were closed yesterday on account of the funeral of the late President, and the Liverpool Cotton market was also closed, so that there is nothing whatever new about the staple.

EXCHANGE.—Reuter's quotation for Bar Silver showing an advance to 51¾d., the market this morning opened very firm with an advance of 1-32d., and this rise has been maintained during the day, closing quotations being:—

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1881.

WE should be glad if some one [illegible] would explain the difference between the political intelligence doled out to the Indian papers from the Press Commissioner's office and the long and full telegrams from the Viceroy to the Secretary of State which the India Office is enabled to place at the disposal of the London Press. Beyond a few growls at the unsatisfactory state of things, from a journalistic point of view, created by the sea of contradictory reports, in Afghan matters, with which we have been deluged for the last three months, we have kept to ourselves the conviction that the Simla authorities knew a great deal more about the state of affairs than they cared to publish. We were willing to believe that an undue disclosure of the facts might, in some way altogether incomprehensible to ourselves, be prejudicial to English interests. And we did not lose sight of the consideration that the seeming ignorance might after all be real enough. Now that the crash in Afghanistan has come, however, it is not a little irritating to find that the London papers of a month ago were able to give their readers a telegram in which the Viceroy noted that Colonel St. John assured him that information had reached him from a trustworthy source that Ayoub's force had much diminished; that his eight regiments did not aggregate 3,200 men, of whom the Kabulis were very discontented; that Ayoub was sending small arms, tents, stores, and money towards Herat, where it was believed some danger was threatening him; that his attempt to raise the Durani horse had failed; and that it was improbable that Ayoub would be able to meet the Amir's forces at any distance from Kandahar. This important information was not absolutely withheld from the Indian papers. But the Press Commissioner's telegram of the same date as that from the Viceroy, which was published in London on the following day by the permission of the Secretary of State, suppressed all the particulars which we have marked in italics, and ascribed what was left to certain unvouched-for "reports from Kandahar." Any one who remembers the distracting nature of the "reports" which were arriving daily from Kandahar about that time, will understand how treatment of this kind was fitted to deprive this particular communication of the importance every one can now see it had. We think the Indian public have a right to complain of the difference between the Viceroy's and the Press version of the former would have gone far to satisfy, and in a harmless way, a legitimate curiosity: not to mention that it might have saved some of our contemporaries a good deal of wild writing.

FROM the letters of the Daily News correspondent so long confined at Merv, and from the correspondence of several of Skobeleff's officers who have addressed accounts of the capture of Geok Tepé to the journals of St. Petersburg and Moscow, it is now quite possible to form an idea of the position occupied by the Russians in the country between Merv and the Persian frontier, if not between Merv and Herat itself. According to a communication from the Daily News correspondent, writing from Meshed immediately after his liberation, published on 27th August, the district which the Russians have annexed brings them upon Persian soil, and, so far as Persia can do so, places Herat at their disposal. A Russian account of the taking of Geok Tepé contains information on this head which coincides closely enough with what the Daily News correspondent has told us. "Thus," says the writer, "fell Geok Tepé, and thus was conquered the whole Oasis which formed, with the single exception of Merv, the sole remaining bulwark of Turkoman independence and arbitrary power—that element of constant disturbance in Central Asia . . .Russian prestige on the borders of Khorassan, Bokhara, and Afghanistan," continues the writer, "is enhanced;" while it is further set forth that unless "certain strong places in the Tekke district, including Geok Tepé, are held by the Russians, the Tekkes, excited by their fellow-tribesmen in Merv, will be sure to recommence their raids in every direction, and to make war upon those tribes who have submitted to Russian rule;" and, moreover, that, "the necessity of bringing Merv into Russian subjection may soon assert itself."

The narrative of the capture of Geok Tepé as given by the Russian journalists, is full of interest; and contrary to their ancient custom in this respect, the Russians admit that they lost heavily in the conflict. The fortress was in shape a trapezium, narrowing towards the south; the eastern and western fronts were each about 2,000 paces long, the others from 900 to 1,200. The wall was one unbroken line, without any sort of flanking defences. But there were on all sides gateways, with long traverses covering them. The primitive mud ramparts were such as the Russians had often met with in Central Asia, and they had generally been able to breach them with field artillery. Speaking of the part played by Major Butler in preparing the defence of the place, one Russian officer writes that, whatever assistance may have been given to the Tekkes, their fortifications at Geok Tepé were of the most rudimentary kind. He adds, however, that the Turkomans seemed to have received good instruction in the art of defending such works as they had, and that in any case they met the Russian attack with great bravery. On the night of 9th January Skobeleff had approached the fortress with a reconnoitring party, but had failed to observe that a body of Tekke infantry, about 6,000 strong, had crossed the ditch of the fortress and concentrated near it. Suddenly they swept down "like a stream of lava" upon the right flank of the Russian works, uttering their shrill war cry. The leading sappers in the second parallel, who were nearest to the point of attack, fell almost to a man. Then the force of the sally was carried towards the mortar battery in the second parallel, where the artillerymen were cut down; and the Tekkes then rushed to the first parallel, where they put to the sword the men who had been working a mountain battery, and succeeded in bearing away one of the guns. They then attempted to get round the Russian right flank, but failed to do so. The Russian troops in camp marched in all haste to the support of their comrades in the trenches, and the sallying party had to retire before superior numbers. But they carried back with them [illegible] town not only the captured mountain [illegible] also the colours of the Ascheron [illegible] and a quantity of rifles and ammunition. In this night attack the Tekkes inflicted upon the Russians a loss of 126 killed and wounded, including a good number of officers. The Tekkes were, however, poorly armed, and the officers who were engaged with them say that only a few had firearms. The greater part fought with swords, and some carried staves, to which daggers, knives, and the blades of sheep-shearing scissors had been fastened. They displayed the most reckless bravery; and in addition to the suddenness and swiftness of their attack, they profited by the fact that the infantry guarding the trenches were afraid to fire, lest they should kill the sappers working in front of them. The earthworks, moreover, rendered it difficult for the men in the trenches to fire with effect. Their shots for the most part went over the heads of their assailants, who on their side ran forward, sprang upon the parapet, and slashed at the defenders of the parallel from above. The next morning the colours of the Apscheron regiment were waving above the citadel of the fortress; and General Skobeleff thought it incumbent upon him to show at once that the Russians had not been depressed by the loss which the Tekkes had inflicted upon them the night before. He accordingly ordered Colonel Kuropatkin (one, by the way, of two officers sent by the Russian Government some years ago to Algeria for the purpose of studying the French method of training indigenous cavalry) to advance with a strong detachment and storm the forts at about 200 yards distance from the east side of the fortress. At two o'clock the attack was prepared by an overwhelming fire from the batteries, directed at all parts of the fortress; and soon afterwards Colonel Kuropatkin's force advanced, with bands playing and colours flying, towards the forts, which were successively stormed. On the night of the 11th January the Tekkes made a fresh onslaught upon the Russian work[illegible] On the right bank. A company of the trans-Caspian local battalion on guard in the trenches was completely annihilated, and once more the Tekkes carried off a mountain gun, together with a number of rifles and a quantity of ammunition. An attack made at the same time by the Tekke cavalry on the camp was repulsed by a few well-directed volleys. In this second affair the Russians lost 150 men; and in order to protect the working parties in the trenches, General Skobeleff now moved the camp close to the second parallel, where the whole division was concentrated in the form of a square. This advance was in the first instance more advantageous to the Tekkes than to the Russians; for the former, with the rifles which they had taken, were able to fire into the Russian mass. Nevertheless, when on the 16th January the enemy undertook a third sortie, it was driven back by a few well-aimed volleys; and the next morning it was reported by the spies that the Tekkes were leaving the fortress, and departing with their household goods and their cattle towards the northern steppes. It was further reported that the chiefs had in vain ordered another sortie. It was evident that the defenders were losing heart. Three days previously, moreover, a horde of cavalry, 4,000 or 5,000 strong, had quitted the fortress, and after advancing first towards Bami, had suddenly wheeled round to the east, and taken the road which leads through Askabad to Merv. These forces included most of the reinforcements which had come from Merv, and is said to have formed "the flower of the Tekke cavalry." A mining gallery was now pushed forward from the forts occupied by Colonel Kuropatkin. A new mortar battery was erected on the right flank for bombarding the place; while on the left a breaching battery of four guns was mounted, and set to work.

The final act was now at hand. But meanwhile the Russians were much incommoded by the presence in the trenches of Turkoman bodies which, in large numbers, lay rotting and festering. They made signs to the enemy to come and bury their dead, and then informed them through interpreters that while doing so they should in no way be molested. The Tekkes replied that they did not want their dead men, but that if the Russians liked to bury them, they should not be fired upon whilst so employed. The Tekkes kept their word. They showed themselves in crowds on the ramparts; and when the work of interment was at an end, took off their hats, bowed to the Russians, and called out, "Now get back to your trenches, we are [illegible] upon them the [illegible] of offering further resistance, but in vain. The Tekkes were determined to resist to the last. In the course of the next few days a breach was made at one point, while at another a portion of the wall was blown down by the explosion of Colonel Kuropatkin's mine. The batteries played all night on the open spaces to prevent the damage done from being repaired; and the next morning the fortress was attacked by three storming parties, two of which fought their way into the town through the practicable gaps, while the third entered by escalade. The Tekkes defended themselves with great bravery, and did not give way until after the Russians had brought up their reserve columns. Within the town the Russians found nothing but wide open spaces "filled with thousands of tents and with the weeping women and children of the Tekke warriors." The fighting men had fled by various gates, but for the most part in the direction of Merv. Geok Tepé was taken, and the Russian cavalry was sent out the same night in pursuit of the last body of fugitives. A few days afterwards a flying column was despatched towards Askabad, which was occupied without fighting on the 30th—a proof, we are told, "that no further resistance was to be expected from the Tekkes, who had fled to the desert and to Merv." In March Tekme Sirdar, chief of the Akhal Tekkes, arrived in General Skobeleff's camp and surrendered himself; and it will be remembered that this warrior had an interview with the Daily News correspondent at Merv, just before starting on his sad expedition. He said to the correspondent, in the course of a long interview, that the Russians at Askabad were much nearer to Merv than were the English at Kandahar; and as the English are now not even at Kandahar, while the Russians are still at Askabad, which they have made the seat of Government in those parts, Tekme Sirdar's argument as to the expediency of making terms with Russia has at least lost nothing of its cogency since it was first enunciated.

ENGLISH POLITICAL AND SOCIAL LETTER.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, SEPT. 9.

EVERY moderate and reasonable politician must rejoice at the victory won by the Liberal candidate in Tyrone county. The Parnellites, who are furious at the prospect of losing their livelihood through the acceptance of the Land Act by the majority of the tenant farmers, and the consequent overthrow of the domination of the Land League, made up their minds to try a fall with the Government in Ulster, and they have been signally worsted. I am not sorry myself that the Conservatives also have been taught a lesson by the defeat of Colonel Knox, as to the dangers of coquetting with such a desperate faction as that of Mr. Parnell, which has no other aim than to make a burlesque of Parliamentary Government by rendering impotent for good in Ireland any Ministry which will not obey the dictation of Mr. Parnell. Some keen Tory partisans, who act on the principle of the saying ascribed to Mr. Spurgeon at the general election, that he would vote for the devil himself in order to turn Lord Beaconsfield out of office, were foolishly delighted at the intervention of Mr. Parnell in Tyrone, not of course because they expected his nominee to win, but because they were convinced he would draw away a sufficient number of votes from Mr. Dickson to insure the election of Colonel Knox. But now that the Land Act is passed, it seems to me that all loyal Irishmen, whether they call themselves Liberals or Conservatives, should continue their efforts to make it a success, and should unite against those mere disturbers of the public peace who are resolved to maintain the rule of anarchy in Ireland. The Marquis of Waterford has set an admirable example to Irish landlords generally by issuing a letter to his tenants, in which he says that he disapproved of and tried to alter many of the provisions of the Irish Land Bill, but that, now it has become law, he means to carry it out in the spirit as well as the letter; and he gives substantial proof of his sincerity in making this avowal by offering the tenantry very substantial concessions. This is the letter of a high-minded politician who scorns to make the welfare of his country subservient to the claims of his party; and it would be well for Ireland if the spirit shown by Lord Waterford more generally prevailed. Unfortunately, it is too probable that in the south and the west the irreconcilables will still be able to carry all before them; but the Tyrone election, at all events, proves that Ulster intends to give the Land Act a fair trial, and is grateful to the Ministry for their efforts to redress the wrongs of Irish tenants. Mr. Gladstone, I should think, must have felt happier last night, when he heard what was the result of the election, than he had done for many a long day, for no Irish agitator has ever suffered a more crushing defeat than Mr. Parnell rashly courted in Tyrone.

In England, on the other hand, the fortunes of the Ministry are at present under a blight. All sorts of excuses are offered by the Daily News to explain away the loss of two seats in North Lincolnshire and Durham, but I would commend those of your readers who may care to learn the truth about this matter to the very candid leading-article in last night's Pall Mall Gazette, in which it is admitted that the figures of the voting in both elections bear witness beyond a doubt to the existence of a serious reaction in the counties from the sympathy with Liberalism which the agricultural class displayed at the general election. Perhaps the election of Mr. Lowther and Sir G. Elliott is not more significant of this reaction than the ignominious collapse of the Marquis of Blandford's candidature in Cambridgeshire. The farmers have evidently discovered that the promises of prosperity to be realized soon after the advent of the Liberals to power were quite delusive; and rendered desperate by another bad harvest, they listen eagerly to candidates of Mr. Lowther's stamp who boldly announce themselves as protectionists. The Liberals seem to me wholly to misunderstand the character of the new agitation against free trade. They go on the old tack of denouncing the cupidity of the landlords and the cupidity of the farmers, as if the territorial interest could still do what it liked in Parliament, and was only held in check by a wholesome fear of popular indignation. But the landed interest, however indignant, can do but little to bring back the régime of protection without the help of the electors in the great towns; and the really formidable element in the present agitation is that the counties are only in accord with many of the great boroughs. Note, for instance, the meeting of representative workmen [illegible] parts of the country. If fair trade prevail over free trade, there will be no longer any pretence for laying the blame of this reaction on the landlords. A return to protection can only be the people's doing, and there are many signs that the mass of the people are protectionists at heart. Free trade was, in fact, established in England by the will of the middle class, who became the ruling power in the State after the revolution of 1832, and stormed the last stronghold of the territorial aristocracy by abolishing the Corn Laws in 1846. Mr. Disraeli's Reform Act transferred the controlling authority in the State from the middle class to the workingmen; and the latter, pressed by a series of bad years, now ask why they should not form a trades union to protect themselves against French and other foreign competition. Lord Derby has come to the aid of the free traders by making a speech intended to show that England is still very prosperous; but his speech is clearly based on the misleading statistics of the trade returns, rather than an actual knowledge of the state of business throughout the country. His figures are misleading because no trade returns can show the movements in securities, which are as important as the shipments of merchandize and bullion. The Quarterly Review goes on the wrong tack altogether in expressing alarm at the great yearly excess of imports over exports. The true case against free trade is that this excess of late years has been quite unreal, being counterbalanced by large transfers of securities from English to foreign hands, and that, consequently, there must have been a steady decline in the profits on our export business. At the same time, the wealth of this country is so prodigious that it will take many years of depletion to make any sensible impression upon it. Lord Derby has naturally seized an opportunity of this kind to emphasize the separation between himself and the Conservative leaders, for the latter are now more or less openly committed to a policy of opposition to "one-sided free trade," whereas Lord Derby has always been a staunch disciple of Cobden and Bright so far as political economy is concerned. But what amuses most people, and scandalizes the more raving partizans, is the independent line taken by the Standard newspaper, which holds that victories won by Conservatives who use protection as a rallying-cry must be a fruitful source of embarrassment and perplexity to the Conservative party. Nay, the Standard even goes further, and deprecates any active opposition to the Ministry at the present moment, on the ground that the country has not yet made up its mind to discard Mr. Gladstone's Government. Such advice seems silly enough. It is the business of politicians out of office to keep on fighting. If they wait till the country has declared itself,

FURTHER DETAILS OF AYOUB'S DEFEAT.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 27.

A more detailed account of Ayoub's defeat given by the Englishman, says that early on the morning of the 22nd the Amir advanced a body of troops to make a reconnaissance with the view of occupying the southern end of the hills under which old Kandahar lies. He did not appear that he had any intention of forcing a general engagement.

Ayoub's artillery opened fire, and the Amir resolved on forcing a general attack on Ayoub's position. Ayoub formed for a counter-attack with the Kandahar regiments in front, the Ghazis and irregulars behind in support, two Kabuli regiments in reserve, the Herati horse on the right towards the Herat[illegible]

Two K[illegible]uri and two Herati regiments were with Ayoub himself at Chilzina. The Kabuli regiments were in charge of the baggage in the rear.

The fighting lasted some hours, but was not serious. The loss on both sides was trifling. Ayoub's two Kabuli regiments in reserve fired on the Ghazis and irregulars in their front, which caused a panic among Ayoub's troops, who broke and dispersed over the country, except two Herati regiments which went over to the Amir. No pursuit was made.

Kandahar is in possession of the Amir's troops. It is not known whether it is personally occupied by the Amir. It is reported that some looting has taken place.

The sum which reached the Committee from Bombay was £3,600, from Bengal £4,490, from Madras £6,898-8. The sum of £239-11-1 was sent from Kandahar by the troops there, and the State of Hyderabad sent £2,740. The Committee received from America sums amounting to £11,244-12-3, and from Canada and South America £3,802-9-8. Australia sent £94,916-16-8. This general report of the Committee is of considerable value, as it indicates in a great measure the difficulties with which the Irish peasantry are constantly surrounded. It will also form an excellent guide for any movement of a similar kind which may be organised in the future.

THE Ahmedabad Vaishnavas, who are endeavouring to move Government to construct a line of railway to their holy city of Nathdwara, might benefit from a suggestion made by the Bombay Samachar, to undertake the construction themselves. They are evidently unaware, the paper supposes, of the recently enunciated policy of the supreme Government, to utilize private native capital in the construction of railways in India. The Samachar thinks the proposed line a very good opportunity for the native community to set about helping themselves. The line is only 50 miles in length. The memorialists themselves assure Government that it would pay, and it is known very well that they could have all the support an undertaking of this kind might require from Government. Why not make a beginning now, and try to respond to the well-intentioned call made by Lord Ripon's Government to utilize the country's capital for the country's good? asks the Samachar. The Jame Jamshed and the other Gujarati daily also give like advice to the Hindoo community interested in the proposed line, and have no doubt that, if they come forward with the required capital, Government would hold out all the necessary facilities for the construction of the line.

ANY measure like the Indian Companies' Bill which is now before the Supreme Council, would be quite ineffectual, declares the Rast Goftar, for the good of public companies, in Bombay at least, if it did not contain provisions against the system of agencies. Life-long agencies, and agencies contemplated to descend from father to sons and to grandsons, are the order of the day here; for, says the paper, of all the mill companies here there are only two that are not afflicted with this burden. The way these agents manage to keep control in their hands makes the concerns so completely proprietory save in name, that they may scarcely be called joint-stock property. The various complements of these mills in their various branches are contrived to serve the purpose of filling first the agent's pockets in all manner of ways, and the drippings that remain go to the poor shareholders. The Rast Goftar other vernacular papers are convinced that any public measure which does not tend to free the splendid growing industry of India—the manufacture of cotton and raw material—of the cankerworm named "Agency Commission" would be grievously wanting in its primary object, to protect the interests of the general body of shreholders.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—It may interest your readers, Parsees in particular, to learn that the names of the months found on the recently deciphered tablet of Babylon, an account of which appeared in your issue of Tuesday, are all Persian. It is curious most of the nations residing in the west of Persia have adopted the Persian calendar, even to the names of their months. The late Professor Benfey has clearly shown, in his learned work "Neberdic Monatonomen Einiger Alten Volkers," that most of the names of the Jewish months correspond almost literally, with modifications naturally to be expected from transferring a word of one language into another, to those of the Persian. Those that do not are traceable to the Persian origin, though etymologically no corresponding names thereto are to be met with at the present day: as, for instance:—The Jewish Sivon is the Persian Sepen (dad); Elul is Khordad; Tischri is Tir; Marheshvan is (A) Merdad; Khishler is Sherevar; Ader is Ader; Ab is Ardibehesht. Though Nisan, Jyar, Thammus, Jebeth, and Shebet have no names corresponding to them in Persian, still they defy all attempts at etymologically deriving them from the Jewish or any other cognate language, but yield readily when tested by Zend etymology. The names found on the tablet are Elul, Tischri, Ader, Nisan, and Jyar. This settles any doubt as to whom belonged the names originally adopted. To your Parsee subscribers who read Gujarati the seventh number of Mr. K. R. Cama's 'Zortoshti Abbyos may be recommended for perusal, were this matter is dealt with at length.

A STORY is printed by a Paris paper from its St. Petersburg correspondent to the effect that an embezzlement to the extent of three-and-a-half millions of roubles had been detected in the accounts of Baron Kuster, the major domo of the Palace, and that the Baron, after his arrest, committed suicide.

THE Government of India (the Standard says) has it in contemplation to re-establish the office of Naval Adviser, lately held by Admiral Bythesea, V. C. The new official would hold the rank of Director-General of Marine, and the appointment, if sanctioned, will, it is believed, be offered in the first instance to Captain J. F. G. Grant, H. M. S. Malabar.

A TUNIS telegram in the Times states that the Bey has instructed Ali Bey not to proceed with his troops until further notice, and a native official of high position has been ordered to go to Kairouan, to make a last effort to pacify the leaders of the insurgents. The usual pilgrimage of Tunisian Arabs to Mecca will not take place this year, as the religious chiefs exhort them to defend the holy city of Kairouan instead.

MR. GRANT-DUFF on Sept. 6 received a deputation at New Hailes, near Edinburgh, where he was the guest of Lord Shand, from the Foreign Missions Committee of the Free Church of Scotland. The deputation pointed out that their College Council at Madras did not receive the grants they were entitled to by the Education Despatch of 1854, and stated that they thought if the standard of Government fees were raised they would be able to do [illegible] Lieutenant-Court replied that he would give the subject most careful consideration.

SPEAKING at Southport, Lord Derby quoted statistics to show that trade, though temporarily depressed at present, has been steadily progressing during the last ten years. The imports, as he pointed out, had during that time increased from £303,000,000 to £411,000,000, and the exports, which were in 1870 £244,000,000, had in 1880 risen to £286,000,000. His lordship also noted a decrease in the number of paupers.

THE Secretary of State for War has given instructions for the sum of four thousand five hundred pounds to be placed to the credit of the Secretary of State for India in Council, to be expended in meeting the claims of the non-commissioned officers and men of those corps now serving in India who did duty during the recent campaign in Zululand, and who are entitled, in accordance with the recent decision of the War Office, to an allowance of one pound per man as compension for extra wear and tear of uniform on service.

THE boring operations at the Channel Tunnel experimental works near Dover have been suspended for a short time to admit of the removal of some of the machinery. The boring at the Abbott's Cliff heading having been successfully carried to the distance contemplated, the machinery is being removed to the other heading at the Shakspeare's Cliff shaft. Up to the present time, it is stated, the progress of the work has been of the most satisfactory character, and justifies the hopes entertained by the promoters of the ultimate success of the project.

THE Army and Navy Gazette notices that the "Dorsetshire Regiment," formed of the 39th and 54th, has included among its honours in the new Army List the Royal Tiger and Seringapatam. By whose authority have these additions been made to the regimental distinctions? It is usual to issue a general order when a regiment receives any new honour. A reference to the Army List will show that the two corps in question have not hitherto enjoyed the privilege of bearing the Royal Tiger on their colours. As they were not present at Seringapatam, it is difficult to understand why they should have been singled out to commemorate an action in which they took no part.

THE court-martial on the loss of the Doterel has been concluded. Commander Evans handed in a written defence, and called witnesses as to the discipline and interior economy of the ship. The Court found that the destruction of the Doterel was caused by two distinct explosions, the first being an explosion of gas evolved from the coal in the bunkers, and the second an explosion of the powder in the fore magazine—the second explosion being a result of the first. The Court acquitted Commander Evans and the surviving officers and crew of the Doterel of all blame, and returned to the commander and the other prisoners their swords.

AT a banquet given at Honfleur on September 6 in his honour M. Gambetta replying to the toast of his health, proposed by the Mayor, said: "People have done wrong to personify a principle by any single man. Confusion between individualities and the Republic ought not to be permitted. The latter must soar above men and parties. The business of the country has developed because its policy has been better conducted than formerly. The Minister of Commerce has told you that it would not suffice to excavate docks and multiply the means of transport, if your sphere of action were not extended and fresh outlets made for commerce. Indeed, it is time for all to fix the economical and commercial regime of France in its relation to all foreign Powers. My own convictions are unchanged. You are strong, ingenious, and bold enough, and you have had sufficient experience to sustain competition with other nations." In conclusion, M. Gambetta expressed a wish that treaties which sanction free trade should be consecrated at no distant date.

KHAN SAHEB FURDONJEE PESTONJEE.—An interesting ceremony took place on Monday morning at H. E. the Commander-in-Chief's bungalow at Poona in the awarding of the Mutiny medal to Khan Saheb Furdonjee Pestonjee, nearly a quarter of a century after the services earned it. The recipient has served, in the Supply Department, in the Crimea, in the Persian expedition, and in Abyssinia, and he is now in charge of the Field Column Carriage in Poona. A large gathering was assembled, consisting of about one hundred military officers, European and native, with a large number of civilians. Among the former were Colonels Ostrehan and Bolton, Major Hughes, and Lieutenant Westropp; among the latter, Khan Bahadur Dustur Nosherwanjee Jamaspjee, Dustur Hoshangjee Jamaspjee, Professor, Deccan College, and Dustur Bomanjee Jamaspjee, C. I. E., Assistant Commissioner. His Excellency when presenting the medal, after having read the order of the Secretary of State for India, spoke to the recipient to the following effect:—"Khan Saheb Furdonjee Pestonjee, I have much pleasure in awarding this medal to you. I regret that such a long time should have intervened between the field of action and the award of the medal; but it is an honour very highly coveted, which has been given to a non-combatant in the field." In reply, the gentleman decorated said:—"Your Excellency, one of the greatest pleasures experienced by me during my lifetime I have just now enjoyed, namely, receiving from the hands of one so exalted as your Excellency the decoration which Her Most Gracious Majesty has been pleased to bestow on me, and for which I can only tender, as I now do, my heartfelt gratitude. The exceptional honour your Excellency has done me in handing me, in person, the India medal granted by our Queen-Empress for services rendered during the Mutiny, is one that I shall never forget, and the remembrance of it will always be a source of joy to me."—Deccan Herald.

THE THEFT AT THE GR[illegible]AT EASTERN S. AND W. MILLS.

YESTERDAY, at the Girgaum Police Court, Cawasjee Rustomjee Khan, a clerk in the above mills, [illegible]ere Bhana Vunna, a Marwarree shop-keeper, [illegible] brought up on remand and charged before Mr. Ryan,—prisoner No. 1 with having while employed at the great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Mills, on or about the 8th instant, stolen four bales of piece-goods, of the value of Rs. 800, the property of his employers; and prisoner No. 2 with having dishonestly received the property, knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen.

Mr. Pherozeshaw Mehta, instructed by Mr. Gilbert, appeared for the prosecution; Mr. Ardaseer Bezonjee, pleader, appeared on behalf of prisoner No. 1; and Mr. Branson, instructed by Mr. Turner, solicitor, on behalf of prisoner No. 2.

Before the case was proceeded with Mr. Branson desired to know, in order to shorten the proceedings in this court, whether his Worship intended to commit the prisoners for trial at the Sessions of the High Court, should he think a primâ facie case had been made out against them.

The magistrate said he intended to commit the case to the Sessions.

Mr. Ardaseer, on behalf of prisoner No. 1, said that his client wished to withdraw the plea of guilty made at the last hearing. The prisoner now pleaded not guilty, and claimed to be tried on the charge.

The magistrate said that as prisoner No. 2 pleaded not guilty and claimed to be tried, prisoner No. 1 might also be tried. However, he had it on his notes that prisoner No. 1 had admitted the truth of the complaint against him.

Mr. Harry Brewin, Acting Superintendent of Police, Division, was re-called and examined by Mr. P. Mehta in regard to the circumstances connected with the charges against the two prisoners.

Mr. Branson reserved the cross-examination of this witness.

Mr. John Hamnett, chief engineer and manager of the Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Mills, was next examined by Mr. Pherozeshaw. His evidence went to show the manner in which the yarn and piece-goods manufactured in the mills were registered in a book kept for that purpose, and the position prisoner No. 1 had held in the mills.

After other evidence was recorded the case was adjourned for further hearing.

HIGH COURT.—SEPTEMBER 27.

(Before the Hon'ble Sir CHARLES SARGENT.)

THE AFFAIRS OF THE NEW DHURUMSEY MILLS.

NUSSERWANJEE MERWANJEE AND OTHERS vs. JOHN GORDON AND OTHERS.

THE rule obtained by Mr. Inverarity for the plaintiffs on the 11th August, restraining the defendants from employing Messrs. Hearn, Cleveland, and Little as solicitors of the new Dhurumsey Poonjabhoy Spinning and Weaving Company, was called on for further hearing.

Mr. Inverarity, instructed by Messrs. Crawford and Boevey, appeared for the plaintiffs; the Advocate-General and Mr. Lang, instructed by Messrs. Hearn, Cleveland, and Little, appeared for the first three defendants, Mr. John Gordon, Mr. J. R. Duxbury, and Mr. Joomabhoy; and Mr. Jardine, instructed by Messrs. Craigie, Lynch, and Owen, represented the New Dhurumsey Poonjabhoy Spinning and Weaving Company.

The Advocate-General, resuming his arguments against the rule, said the court would not grant an injunction unless the agents should have sustained some grievous injury,—which did not appear to be the case. A portion of the plaint expressed a mere fear on their part that in passing the resolution respecting the appointment of the solicitors the object of the defendants was to oust the plaintiffs from their appointment as agents, and get the management to themselves. The only persons competent to complain of the conduct of the directors were the shareholders; but the Advocate-General remarked there was no suggestion from the beginning to the end of the plaint that the plaintiffs were shareholders. One of the incorrect assertions in the plaint was that Mr. Gordon made strenuous efforts to be on the board of directors. The learned counsel read a letter of Mr. Gordon stating that he had no desire personally to be a director; that he would be satisfied if either Mr. Kittredge or Mr. Sorabjee Framjee Patell were elected to the board; and that the agents had his support, provided they managed the business with due regard to the interests of the company. The mere fact of the appointment of Messrs. Hearn, Cleveland, and Little did not entail any loss upon the plaintiffs. If it did injury to anybody, it was to Messrs. Crawford and Boevey, who, however, were not the plaintiffs in this suit. The Advocate-General therefore submitted that the court could not interfere, and grant an injunction for the specific performance of the agreement between the agents and the company.

After the Advocate-General had concluded his junior, Mr. Lang, rose to address the court.

Mr. Inverarity objected to it, and said that Mr. Marriott had already occupied three days in showing cause against the rule.

His Lordship said it was not the practice for a junior to follow up with another speech [illegible] as a junior, and was willing to have addressed the court under similar circumstances, and that the matter being one of vast importance to joint-stock companies, he thought it would be well that Mr. Lang should be permitted to make another address to the court on behalf of his clients.

The matter was then adjourned until to-morrow (Wednesday).

LONDON BANK SUITS.

THE LONDON, BOMBAY, AND MEDITERRANEAN BANK vs. FRAMJEE SORABJEE BHARUCHA.

MR. LYNCH, instructed by Messrs. Tobin and Roughton, on behalf of the bank, applied for a postponement until the 6th December next, in order to enable the bank to serve summons on the defendant. The learned counsel believed that the defendant was willing to have the summons on him, but that he had recently changed his address.

The defendant.—I have not changed my residence. My address is 200, Chinch Bazaan. I may tell your Lordship that I offered to receive the summons this very morning.

The hearing was then postponed until the first short-cause day after the vacation.

The suits institu[illegible]ted by the London B. and M. Bank against Hajee Abdool Jalab Babanee, David Jacob Daniel, Javermull Bimdaree, Davis, Ezekiel Jamidass, and Munchergee Shapoorjee Damodur Lakhmidass, were struck out on account of the non-appearance of the parties.

(Before the Hon'ble Mr. Justice WEST.)

JUMNADAS BAPOOJEE vs. BHIKABHOY SAMULDAS.

JUMNADAS GUDROODIN, instructed by Messrs. Tyabjee Mr. Tyabjee, for the plaintiff, asked for a week's adjournement on the ground that the translations were not ready. There was no appearance for the defendant, and the application was granted.

MANIK CANDJEE AND OTHERS vs. KESSOWJEE JADOWJEE.

MR. INVERARITY, instructed by Messrs. Smith and Frere, for the defendant, said that his client had filed a written statement, and he moved, therefore, that the case be transferred to the long-cause list.

Mr. Kirkpatrick, instructed by Messrs. Hore, Conroy, and Brown, for the plaintiffs, resisted the application. The suit was brought to recover Rs. 1,266 for work and labour done by the plaintiffs in removing and stacking cotton for two years. In addition to fixed rates, the plaintiffs were allowed Rs. 150 a year. The account was adjusted, and the balance claimed remained due.

Mr. Kirkpatrick said the defendant was a very wealthy man; and although he had had ample time, he did not file a written statement until this morning, with a view to keep the plaintiffs, poor laborers, out of their money.

At his Lordship's desire, the first plaintiff was called into the witness-box to see what manner of a man nation in 1815 led, according to Thornton and others, to the downfall of the Mahratta Empire." This illustrious personage takes the liberty of forwarding us a "Copy of a monthly magazine which contains a contribution from my humble pen called 'Materials for a Discussion of the Merits of the Hindu and English Astrology,' corrected here and there in consonance with the original in manuscript. I hope the present made by me now will be as leniently dealt with as my other gift, acknowledged in the issue of your magazine for November 1st 1879."

The Theosophical Society, of which the paper in question is the organ, was founded by a Mdme. Blavatsky and Colonel Olcott; the first is described as a Russian by birth, though the name sounds rather Polish, and the other is said to be an American born and bred. We know that it is a weakness of our Transatlantic brethren to bestow brevet rank rather for personal peculiarities than professional services. Thus a retired grocer may be addressed as "Judge" if he have a learned appearance and judicial conversation; while an experienced magistrate, if he chance to hold himself erect and wear a close-buttoned coat, is certain to be dubbed "General." Whether Colonel H. S. Olcott's title was earned in the War of Secession or at the bar of a drinking saloon we are unable to say, but it is quite apparent from the Colonel's communications that he belongs to the "spirit medium" fraternity, and is, therefore, presumably one of the class with whom the police courts have had frequently to deal. Mdme. Blavatsky's chief claim to renown is the invention of a certain Indian mystic brotherhood, who have inherited the wisdom of the ages, and who express themselves in choice American, and, though invisible, spend their leisure in producing raps, flowers, and tea-cups, after the approved manner of the disembodied spirits of modern American necromancy.

The Theosophist is full of translations from the works of ancient "theurgists," of "spirit communications," and of balderdash of all kinds, flavoured with the pseudo-science and second-hand archæology which distinguish "trance lectures" and the utterances of "materialized spirits." Our old friend Zadkiel, too, has a good word said for him, our correspondent's article dealing seriously with a comparison of the merits of Hindu and European astrology. "Omne ignotum pro magnifico" is a trite adage; and we dare say that all this rubbish presents itself to the Hindu mind as serious Western lore, just as the average European seems to imagine that Persian literature consists of a few love songs of an exaggerated hyperbolical style, and that the religion of Hindus and Buddhists is an unreasoning worship of stocks and stones. "The grandson of the historic Gungadhur Shastri," the admirer of Zadkiel's astrology, is not, we hope, a typical representative of the native educated Indian; but the [illegible] the American-Indian Society to which he [illegible] and in whose journal he publishes [illegible] twaddle, can hardly exert a [illegible] upon his compatriots.

FLORILINE.—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a peculiar pearly whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age.
